Porter and Chester Institute's New London Campus Welcomes Marc Feldman
Director of Operations and Education

New London, CT – Porter and Chester Institute is pleased to announce Marc Feldman as New London's Campus Director of Operations and Education. In this leadership role, Feldman will assist in fostering a culture of academic quality, growth and operational efficacy among students, faculty members and staff. Feldman is in charge of overseeing the human and financial resources while developing a responsible budget to reach Porter and Chester Institute's New London campus goals.

"Porter and Chester Institute is fortunate to have found such a qualified individual to fill this important position at our New London campus. Marc joins PCI with the relevant education and industry experience. He is very data driven and looking for ways to constantly improve the student experience. Marc's track record of efficiency, innovative thinking, and student-centered approach aligns with PCI's mission of preparing students for careers through industry modeled education and training. We look forward to Marc's contributions to our team," said Jim Bologa, President and CEO of Porter and Chester Institute.

With a Master of Arts in Philosophy from Yale University, along with 20+ years of leadership experience in college education, Feldman has overseen numerous academic programs. Feldman has also worked with Fortune 500 companies as a market and brand strategist and business process consultant, and is the former Executive Director and Founder of PapaInk! The International Children's Art Archive, which reaches one million online visitors a year.
